How the Robots Came

"JADE! Give me back Mr. Puffins! You know I don't like you taking him from my bedroom." "Kelsey, you know that Mr. Puffins is just a stuffed duck that waddles across the floor right?" "Yes, but I'm eight and I still like toys. But since your fourteen you wouldn't understand." "Okay you can have Mr. Puffins back." Jade said handing back the stuffed duck. "Thanks." Kelsey said, while she snatched back the duck from her older sister's hands.

All of the sudden the floor started to rumble and shake. The girls thought it was an earthquake because that was very common where they lived. But when they looked out of the window they saw large ships made out of scrap metal flying over their city.

"Jade what are those things?!" "They're ships that robots fly- but that's impossible!" Jade said shakily. "What? What is it! I'm scared!" Kelsey said on the verge of crying. "They're ships that dangerous killer robots fly. I read about them in a sci-fi book. People didn't think this would ever happen! We have to run before they land!"

" Uhhh... We're too late! They're all starting to land. One is in our yard! Do they have any weaknesses?" Kelsey asked almost begging for Jade to say their weakness. "They are killer robots, so they don't have any weakness!" Jade said as she hugged Mr. Puffins for a little bit of comfort.

"Why are you hugging Mr. Puffins? Oh that's not important right now. What should we do! The killer robot is coming to our door!" Kelsey said.

Kelsey was more terrified than she had ever been. Her worst fear was that she would be alone, no one to comfort her, but most of all, even though sometimes they fought, her worst fear was to lose Jade.

"Kelsey, if the robots take over the world, then we would have to follow every command they give us. We can't let that happen. I need you to run upstairs and grab my biggest mirror, your table, and a bucket of warm water. I know I said they don't have any weaknesses but I think this might work."

"What are we going to do with all that?" Kelsey said with a confused and scared look on her face.

"We will have to grab the robot and set him on the table. Then, we'll show him the mirror and hopefully, He'll be interested in seeing himself because in the book I read, it said these robots have tons of self esteem. Then, since he is made out of electricity and metal, I'll pour the water on him and it will probably shut him down. And these robots are all connected in a weird way so if one shuts down they all shut down. So are you in?"

"Let's do this thing!" Kelsey said. "Okay, 1 2 3 GO!"

(One hour later.) "We did it! Kelsey, we make a great team!" "Yeah!"

The End!
